

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A display package for merchandising articles of commerce with first and second package portions. The first package 5 portion has side walls with outwardly extending tabs, a first interface region, and a back wall with an outwardly extending first cavity portion, with the first cavity portion having a first engagement formed thereon. The second package portion has side walls, a second interface region, and a front wall with an 10 outwardly extending second cavity portion with a second engagement formed thereon. The first and second package portions fit together along their interface regions. A plurality of display packages can be interconnected by engaging the first engagement of one display package with the second 15 engagement of an adjacent display package. When interconnected, the tabs of one display package will be positioned next to the side walls of an adjacent display package thereby forming a space between the adjacent display packages. Additional outwardly extended tabs located along a base wall provide a 20 stabilizing function enabling the packages to stand separately and unsupported.
